Post-secondary teaching experience

Teaching English Language Learners in the Early Grades (Fall 2017, Temple University)

This course offers pre-service teachers seeking certification an introduction to theory, research, and practice in teaching emergent bilinguals/multilinguals in the early years. The course reviews the sociocultural characteristics of emergent bilinguals, legal responsibilities, and educational and language policies in the United States. Students will also learn the basic theories and principles associated with second language acquisition. Students are introduced to an array of contemporary, research-based instructional approaches, including content-based instruction, task-based language teaching, and sheltered English instruction. As a result, they will gain an understanding of how to adapt standards-based lessons for emergent bilinguals.

Sociolinguistics in education (Fall 2017, University of Pennsylvania, Graduate School of Education)

This course explores educational issues using sociolinguistic scholarship examining the relationships between language and society both at the macro-level of institutions, communities, and societies and at the micro-level of language as it is used to mediate face-to-face interaction in real time.

Regimes of Language (Spring 2016, University of Pennsylvania, Graduate School of Education)*

This course explores critical perspectives within applied and educational linguistics in order to develop a foundation for investigating the historical construction of speakership, language communities, and languages themselves. These perspectives were applied to contemporary educational issues.

Literacy Research Honors Seminar (Fall 2014, Swarthmore College)**

This upper-level seminar focuses on sociocultural theories of language and literacy to support undergraduates pursue independent research projects.
